Beach means any land in Hurunui District adjacent to any seacoast which is part of the foreshore, or is land contiguous to and used in connection with the foreshore, and to which the public has a right of access. For the purposes of this bylaw, the beach includes the foreshore and coastal land on both sides of the level of Mean High Water Springs.

Camp means to occupy an area with a tent, bivy bag, hut or other form of temporary dwelling or shelter. It also includes the use of a caravan, trailer or vehicle for overnight accommodation.

Fenton Reserve means a Fenton Reserve established by the Ngāi Tahu Claims Settlement Act 1998. The Fenton Reserves are available for use only by the people of Ngāi Tahu or their invitees for camping and fishing purposes.

Foreshore means the land edging the sea, estuaries and rivers that is regularly submerged and exposed by the sea's tidal ebb and flow, that is, the area between the line of mean high water springs level and the mean low water springs level.

Mean high water spring is the highest level to which spring tides reach on the average. This level is generally close to being the "high water mark" where debris accumulates on the shore annually.

Mean low water spring is the lowest level to which spring tides retreat on the average.

Nohoanga means a site established as a nohoanga by the Ngāi Tahu Claims Settlement Act 1998. The sites allow Ngāi Tahu Whānui (tribal members) temporary, but exclusive, rights to occupy the sites to be used to facilitate the gathering of natural resources. The holder of the entitlement has the right to temporarily occupy the land to the exclusion of other persons, subject to conditions on use and public access, applying for up to 210 days in any calendar year, (excluding any day on and from 1 May to 15 August). This includes the erection of camping shelters or similar temporary shelters while the right is being exercised. A nohoanga site is located south of the Waipara River mouth.

Te Rūnanga o Ngāi Tahu means Te Rūnanga o Ngāi Tahu established by section 6 of Te Rūnanga o Ngāi Tahu Act 1996.
